My Word Processor Doesn't Know The Books Of The Bible

The day after I had installed my new version of Word Perfect I was a bit surprised by what I learned - Word Perfect 8.0 does not know the books of the Bible. You see, every word processing program has a built-in "spell checker" that identifies and corrects misspelled words. I found that every time I typed a book of the Bible, the built-in spell checker would underline the word, indicating that it was misspelled or unknown to its dictionary data base. Every book of the Bible, except those containing commonly used names, were unknown to my new version of Word Perfect.

My word processor knows the word "Messiah," but it doesn't know "Isaiah" who foretold the coming Messiah. It knows the word "whale," but it doesn't know "Jonah" which tells us how God once used a whale according to Matthew to accomplish His purposes. It knows the words "division," "divorce," "idolatry," "church," "bishop," and "homosexual," but it doesn't know the books of "ICorinthians," "Galatians," "Ephesians," and "Titus" which tells us what God thinks about these subjects.

Oh, I can fix my word processor. It will take little effort to "teach" my spell checker the books of the Bible. However, the fact that a well known word processor made does not know the books of the Bible is disturbing to me. You see, behind the word processor is a team of programmers— living souls who thought the books of the Bible weren't important enough to include in their dictionary. But it's not just WordPerfect programmers. God's word has been forgotten in nearly every segment of our society.

By the way, just out of curiosity, do you know the books of the Bible? Maybe we had better not point our fingers at others too hastily.

In today's society all of us are concerned with the news. We listen to the radio while traveling to and from work. We read the newspaper when we arrive home. We turn on the national and local news. We want to know what is happening in the world.

There is nothing wrong with this, but let's not forget to spend some time with the "good news," the Gospel. Even if the news of today directly affects you, it's not permanent. The good news of the Bible, whether you accept it or not, will have an everlasting effect.
